Program Description:

Get practical strategies and relevant tools to help you recognize where students are, where they need to go, and how to get them there. This session focuses on research-based formative practices that empower educators to make small, yet powerful changes that engage students and encourage growth. Participants will be able to identify, experiment, and evaluate online tools for formative assessment.

Sessions will cover:

- Understanding the role formative assessment plays within your instruction.
- Learning formative assessment tools and practices that you can use in the classroom.
- Connecting current practice to research about why we should elicit evidence of learning.
- Identifying strategies that can engage all students in providing evidence of their learning.
- Exploring a specific practice/tool and planning next steps for applying what you've learned.
- Outlining how to adjust instruction based on the data collection.

Essential Questions:

- How does formative assessment boost student engagement?
- In what ways does formative assessment help students take ownership of their learning?
- What are some ways you can integrate formative assessment strategies into your current classroom structure?
